COMMISSION ON THE STATUS OF WOMEN
REPORT TO THE GENERAL ASSEMBLY
1975

CHAPTER I - INTRODUCTION

The Commission on the Status of Women was established in 1946 as a subsidiary organ of the United Nations. Its mandate is to promote the advancement of women and to report to the General Assembly on the progress made in this regard.

The Commission has held several sessions since its inception, and has produced a number of reports and resolutions. The present report is the result of the Commission's work during its 29th session, held in New York in 1975.

The Commission's work is carried out through a number of working groups and expert groups. These groups are responsible for the study and preparation of reports and resolutions on various issues relating to the status of women.

The Commission's work is also supported by a number of voluntary experts and consultants. These individuals provide the Commission with valuable advice and information on a wide range of issues.

The Commission's work is based on the principle of equality between men and women. It is committed to the promotion of the full and equal participation of women in all spheres of life, and to the elimination of all forms of discrimination against women.

The Commission's work is also based on the principle of non-discrimination. It is committed to the promotion of the full and equal participation of all women, regardless of their race, religion, or social class.

The Commission's work is also based on the principle of cooperation. It is committed to the promotion of the full and equal participation of all women, and to the elimination of all forms of discrimination against women.
